

Anne E. Preston <apreston@haverford.edu>

Anne E. Preston is an associate professor of economics at Haverford College. She earned her PhD in economics at Harvard University in 1983. She was assistant professor of economics at Wellesley College from 1983-1986, and associate professor of economics at the State University of New York at Stony Brook from 1986 to 1999. Specializing in labor economics, most of Dr. Preston's research focuses on career and workplace issues. Before concentrating on scientific labor markets and comparisons of male and female scientific careers, she investigated labor markets of nonprofit organizations.

Her work on the scientific work forces includes:

"Sex, Kids, and Commitment to the Workplace: Employers, Employees and the Mommy Track," 2001, under review.

"Do Differences in Rates of Skill Depreciation across Scientific Fields Impact Labor Market Outcomes?" 2001, under review.

"Leaving Science for What? Career Paths and Salary Profiles of Men and Women Who Leave Scientific Careers," 2001 under review.

"Why Have All The Women Gone? A Study of Exit of Women From The Science and Engineering Professions," American Economic Review, December 1994.

"Sectoral Comparisons of Career Paths in the 1980's: A Case Study of Scientists and Engineers" in Nonprofit Organizations in a Market Economy, edited by Dennis Young, 1993.

Leaving Science: Occupational Exit of Scientifically Trained Men and Women between 1970 and 1990. Manuscript under review.
