NBER entrepreneurship boot camp 2019 essay

By Nicaise Aman

As a PhD's student, I am currently working on the impact of climate finance on sustainable development in West Africa countries Pr.Ibrahima Thione Diop. In fact, I am student of West African Science Service Center on Climate Change and Adapted Land Use, registered in University Cheick Anta Diop Dakar. In my research, I am attempting to increase the understanding of importance for West African countries to design bankable projects to attract more climate funds to build resilience and cope with the consequences of climate change. I am personally interested in the factors determining the participation and benefit of countries from climate finance, the impact of climate finance on populations 'livelihood and the impact of climate finance on carbon emissions. The final goal of my research is to help countries set up bankable and competitive projects to compete on international climate finance market. As future research, I am interested to focus my studies mainly on environmental entrepreneurship and climate finance to help the world to shift to low carbon development.

What is entrepreneurship? what is finance?

Entrepreneurship is the act of creating businesses to generate profit for the company owners or benefit for the society for the community in case of social entrepreneurship. Today, entrepreneurship is more about transforming the world by finding solutions to solve problems, initiating social change, creating innovative product or presenting a new life changing solution. And finance can be defined as management of money and activities like investing, borrowing, lending, budgeting, saving, and forecasting. Finance can be divided in three big groups, personal finance, corporate finance and public (government) finance.

In fact, those two researches field are very important for wealth creation and management. And I Am very passionate about entrepreneurship and finance. This passion is leading me to dare to apply to this bootcamp to give myself opportunities to learn more.

Why do I want to participate to the boot camp? many reasons can be found.

I want to learn more about entrepreneurship research from the ground up and learn from professionals. It will give me more information on how and where to begin each of the study I will like to conduct. Also understand and make entrepreneurship and finance understandable by the other without having necessarily have an entrepreneur's personality. Entrepreneurship is very wide and I am expected to get skills to conduct economic research on every field of entrepreneurship. Find a business idea is the most important step in entrepreneurship, and I would like to be able do some research on how to find good business ideas, also some economic studies on success stories will be great to study.

Also, finance cannot be dissociated from entrepreneurship research. My passion is driven by help more people with my research and mainly developing countries which have friable economies and will use the results of the results to help grow the number of jobs and powerful and passionate entrepreneurs.

My passion has given me the power that life and political systems in countries are sometimes unjust. If awarded the NBER entrepreneurship boot camp fellowship, I would use the knowledge I will acquire to explore more opportunities, and contribute treasures to the field, valuable not only for their intellectual wisdom, but also because of their societal implications for a better community, Africa and world.
