3 Research interests

My research is in dynamic games, as applied to online markets and housing markets. In the area of online markets, I am broadly interested in how online platforms like Amazon and eBay design their marketplaces, and what that implies for market power and seller competition. In the area of housing markets, I am interested in how housing prices are affected by new amenities and tax policies.

Below, I list my research projects in progress.

- Mediating competition on an online platform: Evidence from Amazon (with Leon Musolff)
- Quantifying differential access to amenities in an urban environment: Evidence from Singapore
- Spillover effects from housing regulation: Evidence from Singaporean administrative data (with Brandon Joel Tan)
