Macroeconomic Simulations with AI Agents

Friedrich Geiecke*

26 March 2026

Link to latest version

Abstract

The most recent advances in artificial intelligence make it feasible to build novel macroeconomic models with AI agents as autonomous actors. The cascade of agent interactions in these simulations offers insight into the endogenous origins of macroeconomic fluctuations without requiring exogenous shocks.

*London School of Economics and Politicial Science, f.c.geiecke@lse.ac.uk